Talks on hold

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Negotiations between the Granite City Federation of Teachers and the Board of Education have been put on hold, at least until Wednesday, Union President Shirley Stoll said Friday.

The teachers, who went on strike Monday, will continue to picket District 9 schools next week, she said.

Negotiating teams for the two parties met for four hours Wednesday and for three hours Thursday.

Neither side would comment on what was discussed at the meetings, but during a press conference Friday morning, Stoll said the school board was "moving backward" at the latest meeting.

> 'We are, I think, stronger than ever'
> Shirley Stoll
> President, AFT Local 743

At Wednesday's meeting "the board's team seemed to have some authority to move forward. The process reversed itself yesterday. They were moving backward."

Later in the day, Stoll said "We felt they had changed their position somewhat from the previous day in regard to finances."

A federal mediator was present at the two meetings. The next meeting will not be called until the mediator has met with both sides individually, Stoll said.

"The latest word is that he can't get both sides together again any earlier than Wednesday, I'm very disappointed to hear."

No votes were taken at a meeting of the union membership Thursday night.

"It was an informational meeting, updating the membership on what had occured."

The sentiment of the teachers "is that we are, I think, stronger than ever," Stoll said. "We're solidly together, that's the general feeling."

Stoll said the union's demand remains the same, a 10 percent raise for all teachers during each of the next two years.

But during Friday's press conference, chief union negotiator Ben Schutzenhofer indicated the union's stand may be flexible.

"Everything is negotiable," Schutzenhofer said.

The school board has offered the teachers a 4 percent raise — and up to 2 percent more if the district shows a surplus at the end of the year — with a reopener that would allow salaries to be renegotiated next summer.

District 9 Director of Finance Norm Owca has said the union's demand would put the district $4 million in debt.

Union spokesmen continued attempts to discredit the district's budget projections Friday.

"Every September for the past five years, this district has projected it will spend more than it will bring in," Schutzenhofer said. "Every year, that has been untrue."

The teachers' two-year contract expired Aug. 14. The union has been on strike since Tuesday.

Beaten man, 24, paralyzed

MADISON — A Granite City man was severely beaten and robbed early Thursday by two or more unidentified assailants he may have encountered at Ralph & Charlie's Steak House, 1431 Fourth St.

Dennis Patterson, 24, of 2820 Buxton Ave., is in critical condition with at least temporary paralysis at St. Louis University Medical Center, where he was admitted at 11:31 a.m. Thursday, seven to eight hours after the beating.

Patterson was comatose when he was taken to the hospital by his brother, David.

Patterson's mother, Norma Patterson, said Dennis, who lives with her, called her at 4:05 a.m. from Ralph & Charlie's to tell her about the incident. A source close to the family said Norma Patterson picked up her son a short time later.

Mrs. Patterson said Dennis didn't say who beat him, only referring to "they." She said the assailants had taken her son's leather jacket, his car keys and his money. She believed he had about $100 on him Wednesday evening.

Patterson was said by police to be a regular customer of Ralph & Charlie's. Lt. Paul Bargiel said Friday that police had not determined whether the incident happened in the restaurant, outside, or someplace else.

Bargiel said the restaurant's proprietor said he couldn't remember seeing Patterson Wednesday evening or Thursday morning. Patterson's car was found on the parking lot.

Patterson's mother said she had been told that the bartender on duty had seen somebody arguing with her son, who she said is barely 5 feet, 2 inches tall and slightly built.

Police could not find the bartender as of Friday.

Patterson's brother was quoted as saying Patterson passed out after complaining about numbness in his limbs minutes before arriving at the hospital.

Federation of Teachers will pay strike loan interest

By Edward T. Hearn

WASHINGTON — The American Federation of Teachers plans to ease the pain for 440 striking Granite City school teachers by paying the interest on any strike loans the teachers take out, an AFT spokesman said last week.

The teachers, who walked out Tuesday due to lack of a new contract, become eligible for the free interest in two weeks if the strike lasts that long, AFT spokeswoman Jane Usdan said.

"As soon as they pay back the principal, we pay the interest," Usdan said.

The AFT, parent union of Local 743 in Granite City, has about 680,000 members nationally and routinely uses their annual dues to pay loan interest when teachers strike, Usdan said.

Under the strike-relief program, the Granite City teachers could take loans from local banks to cover their expenses during the job action and expect the AFT to pay the bank interest from a strike fund.

She said the AFT has a $34.5 million "militancy fund" that the union makes available during job actions. The AFT sets no time limit on how long striking teachers can collect free interest, Usdan said.

"If it's a couple of months, that's what we have done elsewhere," she said.

Granite City teachers are asking for a new two-year contract that contains annual 10 percent pay hikes. School administrators' last offer was a 4 percent increase, AFT spokesman Ben Schutzenhofer said.

The strike, which started about a week after 1988-89 instruction began, has left about 8,300 students with no classes to attend. About 10 teachers crossed the picket line Tuesday, Schutzenhofer said.

Franklin plans to build a 7-Eleven convenience store on South Fourth Street in Venice. Allen: Not next city attorney

GRANITE CITY — Madison County State's Attorney Dick Allen will not be the next city attorney — Allen said it is out of the question.

A rumor had circulated that he might accept such a post.

"As a matter of fact, under the IMRF (Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund pension program) it's my understanding of the rules that I can't take any government-type position," Allen said. "I can't be a public defender, assistant state's attorney, city attorney, anything like that."

Allen was defeated by Bill Haine in the Democratic primary and is not seeking reelection in November.

Allen said he was going to speak to IMRF representatives in Springfield to see if it is possible for him to be contracted to do work for government offices but "I think it's pretty much restricted to practicing law.

"I've got my building and I'm going back to my old law practice at 2945 Madison Ave.," Allen said.

Arnett: 'I was there, but didn't kill her'

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Despite his guilty plea, Gene Arnett said Thursday that he did not kill Nancy J. Bennett.

"About Huck's, I was there but I didn't kill that girl. I'm taking a lie detector test at 1 p.m. today that I requested to prove it."

Arnett was sentenced Aug. 31 to spend the rest of his natural life in prison after he pleaded guilty in the beating death of Bennett last fall while she worked as a clerk in the Pontoon Beach Huck's store.

Bennett was severely beaten with a tire tool and died from the injuries a day later. Arnett also pleaded guilty to armed robbery in the case.

"I was there and that makes me just as guilty, but I'm not the one who beat her. The other guy did. That's what I told the judge when I pleaded," Arnett said.

Arnett said the state's attorney had given his companion in the robbery complete immunity in the case in order to convict Arnett and that, when he was told about the immunity, he decided to go ahead and plead guilty.

Assistant Madison County State's Attorney Robert Trone said immunity had been granted to "a man for his truthful testimony in the case involving Gene Arnett and the Huck's murder. It was restricted to his having participated in none of the physical acts causing the death."

> 'They wanted me so bad they didn't care about who actually did it'
> Gene Arnett

Trone said the immunity was limited solely to the Huck's case.

"You can print whatever Arnett says," Trone said. "You can believe whatever he says if you want to."

Trone said he has no doubt that Arnett committed the acts.

"They keep talking about how bad I am, but then they let the guy who really done it go," Arnett said. "They wanted me so bad they didn't care about who actually did it."

Arnett said his companion at the Huck's store was also the driver in the shotgun highway sniping death of Todd Scrum shortly after the Huck's beating and that the whole truth about that case hadn't come out, either. Arnett was convicted earlier this year of murder in the Scrum case. The man driving his car during the shooting did not testify at the trial.

"He (the driver) won't take no lie detector test," Arnett said. "Huck's, on the highway, he says he wasn't involved there, either."

Arnett said police decided he committed the crimes before trying to find out the whole story.

"I'd done nine years (in prison) and got out those four months and they figured that since I was involved that I'd done it all," Arnett said. "But that ain't the way it went."

Arnett also pleaded guilty Aug. 31 to shooting and seriously injuring Michael Snodgrass during a robbery last fall at a Granite City service station where Snodgrass was an attendant.

Granite City woman, 28, killed on Illinois 3

Yvonne Marie Zotti, 28, 4130 Braden Ave., was killed in a cross-over crash on Illinois 3, about 300 feet north of St. Thomas Road, early Saturday morning.

Miss Zotti was pronounced dead at the scene by Madison County Deputy Coroner Edward Morton at 4:05 a.m. Saturday.

Granite City police identified the driver of second car involved as Edward T. Mitchell, 30, 4009 Braden Ave., who was driving north on Illinois 3.

Mitchell's car allegedly left the roadway, crossed the northbound lanes and the median and struck Zotti's car, which was traveling south on Illinois 3, police said.

Injured in the crash, Mitchell was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Medical Center, where he was scheduled to undergo surgery Saturday.

An investigation into the accident also was continuing Saturday.

Assistant State's Attorney Randy Massey authorized local police to place a hold on Mitchell.

College savings bonds being sold in Illinois

Illinois again is offering a $175 million College Savings Bond sale.

"Last January we had the first sale of college savings bonds and they were greeted with immediate and overwhelming success," said Gov. James Thompson. The new issue also is selling fast.

"As college expenses continue to climb, it is important for parents to anticipate the impact of college-related costs on their budgets. This program will enable them to plan financing for their children's college education well in advance and provide a sound investment plan for future years."

The state first offered $93 million worth of college savings bonds in January, and the issue met with outstanding demand from individuals throughout the state.

Individuals may place orders for the September bond offer through banks and brokerage firms during a one-week period ending Sept. 13.

The bonds offer the same features as the first bond issue, including:

•Double Tax-Free Income. Income from the bonds is exempt from federal and Illinois income taxes.

•Zero Coupon Bonds. The bonds are offered as zero coupon bonds, meaning all interest is compounded semi-annually and paid when the bond matures.

•Non-Callable. The bonds will be offered to the public at prices expected to range from about $1,000 to $3,700 per bond ($5,000 value at maturity) depending on maturity. Specific offering prices and yields are expected to be announced during the order period.

•Security. The bonds are general obligation bonds with the full faith and credit of the state pledged as security.

•Maturity Dates. The bonds mature on Aug. 1, 1993 through 2008, matching the expected college years for children currently 13 years or younger.

•Flexible Investment. While the bonds are designed primarily as an investment to save for college, the money paid at maturity can be used for any purpose.

•Financial Incentives. The state will establish a grant program whereby students enrolling in institutions of higher learning located within Illinois will be eligible to apply for and receive grants if they certify that proceeds of College Savings Bonds were used to pay for their college expenses.

The grants for each bond are expected to range from $100 to $400, depending on the maturity, and will be paid directly to the Illinois college or university. Any such grants will be subject to applicable law, such conditions and restrictions as the state may impose, and future appropriation of funds for such purpose by the Illinois General Assembly.

The First National Bank of Chicago will serve as a senior managing underwriter for the bond issue. Bonds can be ordered from most banks and brokerage firms with offices in Illinois.

Goldenhersh declines to debate with Long

When judicial candidate J. Thomas Long arrives at the Collinsville Senior Citizen's Center for a Sept. 12 "debate," he will be the only candidate there.

His Democratic opponent, St. Clair County Circuit Judge Richard Goldenhersh, has declined to participate in a series of debates with Long, a Republican, who heads the GOP in Madison County.

The two are vying for a position on the Illinois 5th District Appellate Court.

Long, who called for at least five debates, accused his opponent of running a campaign based on secrecy, while Goldenhersh said the call for debates shows Long's lack of experience with the legal system.

The first "debate" is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 12, at the Collinsville Township Senior Center. Long had requested forums be held in Collinsville, Effingham, Carbondale, Mount Vernon and Litchfield.

Long said issues to be discussed include capital punishment, gun control, victims' rights, abortion and interpretation of the law.

He added that specific cases would not be discussed.

By refusing to debate, Long said, Goldenhersh has told voters "they do not have a right to know about our judicial philosophies and backgrounds.

"It is obvious my opponent wants to run a campaign of silence and secrecy," he said.

Goldenhersh disagreed.

He said making a commitment on how he would decide a case before hearing the facts would violate the ethical rules judges and judicial candidates have to follow under the law.

"I can't say that if I get a gun control case I'm going to decide it this way," Goldenhersh said.

"As a practical result, commitments could preclude that judge from hearing such cases and limit his ability to serve," he said. "I will campaign ethically and observe the rules, which include trying to keep my opponent from committing violations.

"It's not like what we're doing is not public," he added. "It's very public."

Goldenhersh also said the call for debates showed a lack of understanding of the courts by Long.

"With a little judicial experience my opponent would realize the ethical and practical problems created by what he suggests," he said.

"An experienced attorney should also realize that capital punishment cases bypass the Appellate Court and go directly to the Supreme Court," he added.

Goldenhersh has been a judge for the past 13 years, and has been recommended by the Illinois State Bar Association.

Long, of Godfrey, is a partner in the Farrell and Long law firm, and has been a practicing attorney for 11 years.

The Fifth Appellate District includes 37 counties in Southern Illinois.

Clarification

Due to a reporting error, Board of Education member Mack Johnson was incorrectly quoted in Thursday's Press-Record.

Johnson did not say, "Whatever I do as a school board member, students have nothing to do with it."

The quote should have read, "Whatever I do as a school board member, my kids have nothing to do with it."

Johnson added, "The students have everything to do with it. They're the reason I'm on the school board."

Harlans announce birth of first child, son

He weighed 8 pounds, 15 ounces.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. George Harlan Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Beachamp, all of Granite City; and Mr. and Mrs. John Alpe, Granite City, are the great-grandparents.

•Beating

Patterson, who spent three hours in surgery Thursday, had multiple brain hemorrhages. Mrs. Patterson said doctors told her that spinal fluid leaked into the brain.

Norma Patterson said her son had no speech Friday and his only responses to family members are moving a hand and blinking his eyes. She said doctors told her that her son had a 10 percent chance of resuming normal movement and that "we're facing a six- to eight-week ordeal.

"I don't know if I'm going to have my son back normal," she said, adding that she was determined whoever was responsible was "not going to get away with it.

"Everybody thinks they can get away with stuff, but they always get found out," she said.

Meanwhile, Dennis Patterson lies motionless, blinking, in a hospital bed, with tubes leading to his head and nose.

"I'm not religious," said his mother, "but I sure turned that way the last two days."

Eilerman chairman of Illinois hospital group

GRANITE CITY — President of St. Elizabeth Medical Center, Ted Eilerman has been elected chairman of the board of the Illinois Hospital Association (IHA) by the organization's board of directors.

"I think the selection reflects the leadership skills that Ted posesses," said Paul Raczkiewicz, SEMC executive vice president and chief operating officer.

The IHA seeks to promote the best possible hospital and comprehensive health services for the people of Illinois.

That goal is pursued by encouraging the continuing improvement of administrative and professional performance in hospitals through education and research, coordination of services between hospitals, and health education of the public, along with cooperation with other organizations having similar objectives.

Eilerman's position at the IHA "will be a boon to SEMC and other medical centers in Metro East, providing us with up-to-the-minute information on health care legislation and new developments in hospitals across the state.

"It also gives the Southern Illinois area recognition and influence in the decision-making process at the IHA. Southern Illinois hospitals share some of the concerns of all hospitals in Illinois, but there are also concerns that are unique to this region. Ted Eilerman will bring these to the attention of the IHA members," Raczkiewicz said.

"He'll get the chance to share with other hospitals in the state," said SEMC Board Chairman Sister Mary Thomas. "They may be experiencing a problem we had six months ago or we may have one they found a solution for last month. It is a tremendous opportunity for the exchange of knowledge and information. I'm very proud of his accomplishment."

Eilerman has served the medical center and the community for the past 20 years. In 1968, he joined the administrative team as an assistant administrator. He followed this in 1974 by being appointed executive vice president. He was named president of the medical center in 1984.

His actual time at St. Elizabeth is much longer than his employment records reflect. He was born at the medical center.

His family also has ties to SEMC. His mother attended nursing school at St. Elizabeth.

Eilerman previously served the IHA in the capacity of treasurer. He also currently serves on the boards of directors of several community and professional organizations.

These include the First Granite City National Bank, Southern Illinois Manufacturers Association, Granite City Optimists, Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce, Illinois Catholic Health Care Association, Regional Advisory Board of the American College of Health Care Executives, the Hospital Association of Metropolitan St. Louis, the Illinois Statewide Health Coordinating Committee and the State Health Planning Agency.

Village officer cited for Major Case Squad role

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTOON BEACH — Police Lt. Mike Crouch has received a Certificate of Appreciation from the Village of East Alton for his part in helping to solve the Aug. 1 homicide at the Lewis and Clark Motel.

The award was presented at a meeting of the Village Board and the citation was read by Village Clerk Mary Warren.

"Mike Crouch, Pontoon Beach Police Department, is honored for his untiring efforts in apprehending and arresting the suspect in the Aug. 1 homicide at the Lewis and Clark Motel. His dedication and knowledge give meaning to the word professional," the certificate states.

Crouch was a member of the Major Case Squad of the Greater St. Louis Area, which was asked by East Alton Police Chief Michael Urban to investigate the murder of Lucille Betz, 63, a night clerk at the motel.

A robbery also had occurred and the motel office was set on fire, apparently to destroy evidence.

Granite City Police Lt. Don Knight was the Major Case Squad team commander for the investigation and also was commended for his work on the case.

After an intensive and complicated two-day investigation, a 16-year-old youth was arrested and charged with the murder of Lucille Betz, and the robbery and fire.

In its 23-year history, the Major Case Squad has investigated hundreds of the most heinous, difficult and well publicized murder cases, including the 1986 murder of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hoffman in Granite City.

Consisting of key personnel appointed from various police departments in the bi-state metropolitan region, the squad has solved more than 85 percent of the cases its members have investigated.

Post office restores past service hours

GRANITE CITY — Window service hours at the Granite City Post Office, reduced a half-day a week in February in response to the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, were restored on Saturday in a way that "best meets customers' needs locally," Officer In Charge Roger O. Wilson said.

The new service hours will be as follows:

The Main Post Office at 24th Street and Madison Avenue will be open 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday; on Saturday, window service will be available from 9 a.m. to noon.

The Nameoki Station in the Bellemore Village Shopping Center Plaza will be open for window service 8:45 a.m. through 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday; there will be no window service available at Nameoki Station on Saturday, but post office box customers will be able to get mail from their boxes from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. each Saturday.

For window service since February, the Main Post Office had been closed on Thursday afternoons from 1 to 5; the Nameoki Station had been closed on Wednesday afternoons from 1 to 4:45, with no box service available on Saturday morning.

"The postmaster general announced in July that savings generated by other actions, primarily internal, would be sufficient to meet the requirements of the Budget Act, and that post offices could restore window service according to local postal needs," Wilson said.

Wilson met with managers at the St. Louis Division to evaluate needs in Granite City and to determine the service that would be restored.

"The intent was not to just retreat to the old hours, but to determine what will be best for postal service in Granite City. The new hours are a result of the deliberation," he said.

The reduction in window service hours was brought on by the Budget Act requiring the Postal Service to reduce federal outlays by $1.245 billion over Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989.

Additionally, the Postal Service had to defer capital commitments totaling $815 million and must make payments of $780 million to cover health benefits and cost-of-living adjustments of postal retirees during this two-year period.

HEADACHE?
WHICH TYPE DO YOU HAVE?
BY
DR. MARK EAVENSON
R.N., B.S.N.D.C.

There are several different forms of the common complaint . . . headache!

1. Migraine: Migraine headaches have several distinguishing features; the pain can be limited to one side of the skull or it can involve the entire skull. It usually lasts from 2-12 hours, but can linger on for days. The pain is described as throbbing, viselike, stabbing pain. In the adolescent, a migraine headache will wake them often during the night. It is associated with gastrointestinal symptoms as well as visual disturbances often.

2. Histamine (Cluster): This type of headache usually begins in early to mid-adult life. The key to this type of headache is that it is a "seasonal" headache occurring with changes in season. It lasts from minutes up to 2 hours. The pain is described as knife-like and stabbing. It always awakens the individual. It is associated with tearing and ulcers.

3. Hypertensive: This headache is usually localized to either the front or the back of the skull. It lasts 2-3 hours. The pain is steady, dull, throbbing. It awakens the individual usually from 4-6 a.m. It is associated with hypertension.

4. Tension: This headache is usually generalized. It can last 4-16 hours. The pain is constant. It is associated with stress.

5. Muscle Tension: This headache is localized to the base of the skull down into the shoulders and lasts 2-3 hours. The patient complains of stiffness and tenderness to the neck and shoulders. It is associated with arthritic conditions of the neck.

6. Temporal: This headache occurs in males greater than 55 years of age. The pain lasts 2-6 months. The pain is knive-like, stabbing and throbbing. The patient complains that he "can't sleep." It is associated with night sweats, weakness and fever.

Hartigan says court decision clears way for Alton bridge

Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan on Aug. 31 saluted a decision in Madison County Circuit Court which removes one of the last obstacles to construction of a new Clark Bridge between Alton and Missouri.

Hartigan's office has been representing the state in attempts to acquire land to allow the bridge to be built.

The court's decision orders the relocation of a section of Norfolk & Western Railway track. The land made available will be used as the approach for the bridge.

That action means that bids on the new bridge could be let next year, with construction to begin as early as the spring of 1990, Hartigan said.

"I emphasized again after my reelection in 1986 the importance of this issue to the community of Alton. My office has fought hard for this bridge, which will mean so much to the economy of Alton and the surrounding area," he said.

"With a new bridge to replace the narrow, deteriorating present structure, Alton will have the chance for a new boom in commercial development."

The land in question was originally given to the city for public purposes in the early 1800s. Hartigan has argued that construction of a bridge that allows for economic development and additional jobs is an appropriate public purpose for the land.

The railroad could still appeal the judge's ruling.

Church

Religious freedom in USSR questioned

By Philip C. Clarke
America's Future Syndicate

By all appearances, one of Mikhail Gorbachev's most remarkable reforms has been the restoration of religion in the Soviet Union.

Clergymen and churchgoers from around the world have flocked to Moscow this summer to participate in the Kremlin-sanctioned millennium of the Russian Orthodox Church.

But according to a former Soviet intelligence officer, now in political asylum in the United States, the appearance of newly granted religious freedom in the Soviet Union is an illusion —part of an elaborate hoax to disguise the effective takeover and control of the Russian Orthodox Church by none other than the KGB. Writing in the Washington Post under the pseudonym of Victor Orlov, the Soviet defector said: "Evidence that the church is penetrated by the KGB comes from my own experience as a KGB intelligence officer."

The defector said there is no way to determine exactly how many members of the Russian Orthodox Church's hierarchy are associated with the KGB today, but added: "There is little doubt that the KGB controls the important activities of the church." Despite all the propaganda about an end to suppression of religion, said Orlov, "The church is not an independent body by any stretch of the imagination. In fact, one of the tragedies of this situation is that millions of honest Christians in the Soviet Union cannot be sure to whom they are confessing."

Orlov said the dilemma confronting the Gorbachev regime is how to control the Soviet church without appearing to violate the human rights of its members. Accomplishing this "tricky task," he said, actually began immediately after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution when most of the church's leaders were murdered or driven into exile. This was followed by the expropriation of church property and a ruthless crackdown against all religious worship.

Orlov said the Kremlin's motives are clear: Realizing it had failed to destroy religion and, instead, had only driven the diehard faithful underground, the regime adopted a typical KGB technique: Penetrate the target and control it. Accordingly, the secret police created a network of informers, mostly by force or threats. When it was found the informers couldn't be fully trusted, the KGB's own officers moved in. "The program was supervised by what's now known as the KGB's Fifth Directorate (responsible for ideology) with support from the Second Directorate (which handles counterintelligence). By the late 1980s, the church had been fully penetrated. The mirage was built."

According to Orlov, the KGB's penetration of the church has an added benefit: It provides KGB officers with an attractive cover for espionage activities abroad. Such activities, he added, apply only to the Orthodox Church based in the Soviet Union and not to the emigre Russian church outside the USSR. "Unfortunately," concluded Orlov, "there's little we in the Free World can do to help the millions of believers and the many honest priests in the Soviet Union. But at least we can deny the communists and the KGB the benefit of accepting the mirage they have created. And we can look with appropriate skepticism at their continuing efforts to control the free expression of religion in the Soviet Union."

Times a-changin' even in church parsonage

By John Stahlman

Bob Dylan, wrote a song, "The Times They Are A-Changin'," in 1963. Because traditions were being challenged, old values rejected, and everything new accepted, the song gained almost immediate popularity.

Even 25 years later, most of us think of the '60s as the decade made unique by change. It wasn't.

It wasn't unique, that is. Even in the '80s, "The Times They Are A-Changin'."

A few weeks ago, a congregation near my rural home proved that things are indeed changin'. My country neighbors and a few traditionalists are adjusting slowly to things recently changed.

The latest change began about a year ago when the pastor left town to accept an invitation from a congregation in Iowa. To end a 13-year relationship of pastor and people changes things. The man who baptized the children of parishioners won't be around to officiate at their weddings. Older members have to wonder if they will have time to make friends with the new pastor who probably will conduct their funeral service. It will take time for a new spiritual leader to earn respect and trust. Changes in loyalty sometimes come slowly.

To provide a measure of continuity, the congregation asked higher church authorities for an interim pastor to provide professional leadership. How long have interim pastors been used by congregations? Has your congregation ever had an interim pastor between fulltime pastors? "The Times They Are A-Changin'."

A pastor leaving and an interim pastor arriving are not the changes that has the town talking, though. They were just the changes that led up to the real change.

The pastoral search committee read hundreds of dossiers, listened to countless recorded sermons provided by eager applicants, and interviewed a dozen or so candidates. Eventually they found the leadership they thought coincided with the congregation's need.

By summer's end, the church with no pastor will have two. One will fill 80 percent of the job and the other will carry 20 percent of the responsibility. Both pastors will live in the parsonage. He will preach three Sundays a month and she will preach one. These new pastors will be the first clergy couple to serve this congregation and live in this community. "The Times They Are A-Changin'."

Another change also worked its way into this congregation. That change approaches the miraculous. The congregation, instead of protesting that this had never been done before, voted to invite the clergy couple by a 98 percent majority. "The Times They Are A-Changin'."

Once upon a time there were no women ordained as ministers. That restriction no longer applies in a growing number of church bodies. "The Time They Are A-Changin'."

Once upon a time only one resident of the parsonage had a contract with the congregation. The other may have been expected to teach in Sunday School, play the piano, sing in the choir, give devotions, and work in the church kitchen, but then as a volunteer. "The Times They Are A-Changin'."

But there were other and earlier changes that rocked the church, too. When Jesus called a group of men to be his friends, marriage did not disqualify any of the 12. Jesus healed Peter's mother-in-law so we know that the pre-eminent disciple was married. Years later, only single men were eligible to be priests. Things changed then, too.

To support that change, I suppose it can be argued that restricting the priesthood to men prevented the mother church from becoming an exclusively feminine institution. In a man's world, the church needed a man's face.

With the same kind of logic, it can be argued that the time has come for the church to free itself of its male domination and acknowledge that the world is no longer just a man's place. Women have entered the work force, the marketplace, and even the Rotary Club. That movement demonstrates that society is a two-gender reality. If the church and its leadership are to be relevant, a two-gender reality must be acknowledged.

Bob Dylan may not have known it, but he is only a recent echo of an ancient hymn writer. He wrote, "Time, like an ever-rolling stream, bears all its sons away: They fly forgotten, as a dream dies at the opening day."

Time changes much. When it changes opinions around the altar, the ancient gospel survives in a modern world.

'World Monitor' on cable channel

The Christian Science Monitor's new nightly half-hour television program, World Monitor, will premiere Monday, Sept. 12, on cable television's all-documentary network, the Discovery Channel. The distribution agreement was jointly announced by officials of the channel and The Christian Science Monitor.

World Monitor will air Monday through Friday at 6 p.m. central time and again at midnight on the Discovery Channel, which reaches more than 32 million homes through cable TV nationwide.

Each night, World Monitor will link its bureaus in London, Tokyo and Washington, D.C., live via satellite, where resident correspondents will provide viewers with depth and insight into major international events. The Monitor's 22 international and domestic news bureaus will be key sources for the program.

John Hart, former NBC correspondent, will anchor the show from the Monitor's studios in Boston. "The broadcast will be driven by the news, but will offer much more than the familiar end-of-the day business," said Hart.

"Lives aren't lived and things don't happen in a vacuum. We see our job as showing how human experience is shared, connected. So instead of bathing people in fragments, we hope to leave them saying, 'Ah, now I see.' "

Church leaders take different stands on film "The Last Temptation of Christ"

Area religious groups are taking various stances concerning protests against the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ."

Some said they would shy away from protests that could build interest in the film.

The Catholic church office for film and broadcast review has given the movie an "O" — morally offensive — rating, said Bishop Edward O'Donnell of the St. Louis Catholic Archdiocese.

The church's committee on communication screened an unedited version of the film.

It found the movie objectionable because Christ was characterized as weak; because of apparent confusion between the divine and human sides of his personality; and because of the graphic depiction of his sexuality, O'Donnell said.

Catholics will be discouraged from viewing the film, he said. But it is up to individual archdioceses to decide how strongly to protest, O'Donnell said.

"Our goal is to protest in such a way that won't sell any more tickets," he said.

The Rev. James Pohl, of the Prince of Peace United Church of Christ in south county in Missouri, said he thinks much of the protest going on is unfair.

"What I find unfortunate is that there is a lot of talk going on and no one has seen the movie," he said.

He said because he has not seen the movie himself, he will not say that it should be condemned.

"There is a lot of smoke to be cleared and a lot of emotion involved," the Pohl said. "But maybe that is good."

The film's release has resulted in discussions on the nature of Christ, and such conversation can strengthen the faith, he said.

"A movie is not going to topple the Christian faith," Pohl said.

An official from the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod is urging Lutherans not to patronize theatres showing the film. But the Synod can only encourage its congregations, said Steven Wenk, of the Synod's news and information department.

Censorship is another concern.

It is a real possibility that movie companies will be scared away from making controversial films, said Miriam Raskin, assistant director the American Civil Liberties Union of East Missouri.

That could limit the free flow of ideas into society, Raskin said.

She said groups have every right to protest the film, but other organizations — such as the ACLU — will not deviate from their strong stand against censorship.

Like Lutheran and Catholic organizations, Baptist groups are concerned that too much protest could aid ticket sales.

One Episcopal minister said she probably will see the film.

Members of the congregation are encouraged to use their own intellect in their relationship with God, said the Rev. Anne Bertlett, associate rector of Advent Episcopal Church of South County.

She said protest against "The Last Temptation of Christ" would not be encouraged.

Weber out of circuit judge race

Republican Don Weber, who last month dropped out of the race for Madison County state's attorney, said he will withdraw as a candidate for a circuit judgeship in Madison County.

Weber, a former Madison County state's attorney, was running against Democrat Paul E. Riley of Edwardsville in the judicial race.

Weber currently is the appointed state's attorney in Ford County in east central Illinois.

Weber said he decided to withdraw because of medical problems in his family. He declined to elaborate.

"I felt that I could win, but I think Paul Riley is a good judge, and I wish him well," Weber said.

Riley was unavailable for comment.

Weber's withdrawal leaves Riley unopposed for election to the judgeship he now holds by appointment. The seat was left vacant by the resignation of William Johnson for health reasons.

Weber also withdrew as a candidate for state's attorney. He had won the Republican nomination for state's attorney without opposition in the March primary election, but he also received several write-in votes for the judgeship, which allowed him to seek that office.

Weber said he withdrew from the state's attorney's race because allegations raised against him by Amiel Cueto, a Belleville lawyer, remained unresolved.

Weber said Cueto's allegations left a cloud over his previous administration. He said he did not believe he could wage an effective campaign with the questions unresolved.

The allegations also would have been a factor in a judicial race, although not as important as in a race for state's attorney, Weber said.

Weber's withdrawal from the state's attorney race left Democrat William R. Haine of Alton unopposed for that office in the Nov. 8 election.

Back system praised as exercise and rehabilitation breakthrough

"With the addition of the Cybex Back System, the Wellness and Rehabilitation Center at St. Elizabeth Medical Center has the latest, most comprehensive rehab and exercise equipment available in the Metro East area," said Ginny Lepping, vice president of Providence Inc.

The Cybex Back System is made up of three units.

- The Trunk Extension/Flexion Unit is designed to test and rehabilitate the muscles used in everyday lifting, carrying and reaching;
- The Torso Rotation Unit is designed to test and rehabilitate abdominal wall muscles, allowing the physical therapist to compare torque, power, work and range of motion on the right and left sides; and
- The Liftask Unit is designed to screen for functional performance that may predispose individuals to back injury. It can be used to train people for certain tasks or correct lifting techniques by simulating specific work tasks, as in the Work Hardening program.

The addition of the Cybex Back System is expected to revolutionize the treatment of back conditions in Metro East.

It is designed to test and rehabilitate the muscles involved in everyday lifting, carrying, pushing and pulling. Injured clients will be able to return to work sooner with a greatly reduced chance of re-injury, it is predicted.

Also, employers will be able to do pre-placement testing to see if prospective employees can perform the lifting, carrying, pushing and pulling tasks required on the job.

"It will be beneficial for the client, the physical therapist, and the physician. With the Cybex Back System, we can give the doctor objective data on the condition of the client.

"Instead of asking the client how he feels today, we can test him and say he only has a 20 percent loss in capacity or a 10 percent loss. It is an excellent way to monitor the client's progress through a rehab program," said Carla Buzan, a registered physical therapist who works with the new Cybex system.

"More than 20,000 hours of clinical testing and 2,500 pathological and post-surgical patients safely tested and treated have demonstrated that the back can be treated like the knee.

"The new Cybex Back System incorporates the same principales as the Cybex II Extremity Testing unit we have used for two years," Buzan said. "It uses the same very safe isokinetic resistance theory.

"In other words, it accommodates the client. We set the speed of the machine. The machine will only go that fast, no matter how fast the client tries to go. This prevents injuries or strains.

"We can limit the motion so a client who cannot bend all the way over cannot overextend while we are testing. Also, the site we are testing is the only one that can be moved. This makes the test reproducable. We can test them when they come in and then retest after exercise and easily compare the results."

Studies show that as high as 85 percent of long-term chronic back pain cases that were treated on the Cybex Back System returned to work after one-and-one-half to four mounts of treatment.

"This is important when one considers that over 12 million Americans suffer from chronic back pain, and more than $40 billion a year is spent on treatment of this ailment," Lepping said.

"This system opens up an entirely new era in back treatment. It allows for an objective, quantitative measure of a back injury, and this is something that was not possible in the past. The physical therapists will now be able to relay to the doctor the exact extent of a client's injury. It eliminates guesswork on the part of the therapist or the physician.

"The Back System is an added asset to our existing rehabilitation program. The equipment is there not only for diagnosis and evaluation but, combined with our Cybex extremity and conditioning equipment, also for exercise and rehabilitation."

Woman, 29, killed on 157

Dawn E. Joiner, 29, Granite City, suffered fatal head and chest injuries in a motorcycle accident on Illinois 157 and was pronounced dead at 8:13 p.m. Thursday at Oliver Anderson Hospital, Maryville.

Miss Joiner was a passenger on a motorcycle operated by Patrick A. Sanders, 24, 1343 Meridian Ave.

She was thrown about 80 feet from the cycle northbound on Illinois 157 after it collided at the intersection of Center Grove Road with a car driven by Joseph B. Nolan, 17, Glen Carbon.

Nolan, who was westbound on Center Grove Road, apparently was not injured.

Sanders was treated for minor injuries at Anderson Hospital and was released. The accident remains under investigation, Edwardsville police said Saturday.

Related information appears in today's obituary column.

Slimettes to register

Registration for the Granite City Park District's popular aerobics class will begin Monday, Sept. 12, at the Wilson Park office.

The classes will begin Monday, Sept. 19, and run for eight weeks. Sessions will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings at 7:15 and Sunday afternoons from 1 until 2.

The Park District continues to use the name "Slimettes" for the exercise to music class that was started many years ago.

Debbie Wiehardt, a certified instructor, will again be in charge. The class provides a way to improve cardiovascular conditioning, tone muscles and burn calories.

The cost is $7.50 for residents and $17.50 for non-residents. Proof of residence must be presented at the time of registration.

For more information, the Wilson Park office can be called at 877-3059.

Pontoon Beach officials to inspect conditions at park

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTOON BEACH — Village officials are scheduled to inspect conditions at a mobile home park on Division Street and a decision is expected soon on whether the park should remain in operation.

Mayor Glen Wilson asked Village Attorney Keith Jensen to accompany him on an inspection survey of the park after a complaint was received by authorities.

"They are taking older trailers from Kaseberg Lane and moving them to the mobile home park on Division Street," Trustee Louis Whitsell said. A village resident called him and complained about the movement of older homes into the Division Street park, he said.

The older model trailers reportedly are being moved from a mobile home park being redeveloped and expanded on Quality Sand property, located east of Illinois 111 off Kaseberg Lane, one official said.

"We revoked the (Division Street park's) license and Weodpohl (the owner) gave us all sorts of promises. I believe he's lost his interest (in the park) and now no one is responsible," Jensen said.

Conditions are worse now than before, Whitsell said.

Since the same problems exist now as a year ago, Jensen said a report indicating present conditions at the park is needed before final action is taken.

"We probably could cite every trailer out there. I think we may have to shut it down," Jensen said.

"There are people living out there who have been there for years. I just hate to put those people out of a home," Wilson said.

"If they (mobile homes) are up to our codes, they are all right," Trustee Don Rea said.

"They (park operators) have improved some of it, but it doesn't look too good," Wilson said.

After the license for the park was revoked on Sept. 5, 1985, the property was sold by the original owner to Robert Weodpohl, St. Louis. Weodpohl was issued a permit to upgrade the property.

If the required changes had been made, the license could have been reinstated, but the park is still operating without a license, officials said.

In July 1987, several residents of the park appealed to the Village Board upon learning that the board was considering closing the park.

Most trailer courts and parks no longer will accept mobile homes that predate the 1980 models and many of those in the park were older models, one man told the trustees last year.

Some work has been done on the property, but not enough to meet village codes, an official said.

Trojans get only one first down as Eagles roll, 43-8

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

MADISON — Don Smith probably wishes he had gone on strike for one night.

While the Granite City High School football team took a forfeit loss on Friday because of the teachers strike, the Madison Trojans had to go out and play 48 long minutes in a gory 43-8 loss to the Columbia Eagles at Sam Dymas Memorial Field.

The numbers were startling in the home opener. The Trojans (0-2) managed only one first down — and that came on a penalty in the first two minutes of the game. Madison had 12 yards rushing — and senior tailback Ian Smith netted exactly one yard on the ground. The Trojans totalled 77 yards of offense and never moved the ball. Their only touchdown came on a 58-yard pass from Robbie Poston to Smith on a fake punt 4:45 into the game.

The Eagles, meanwhile, had a party in raising their record to 2-0. Eric Baldridge rolled up 171 yards on 16 carries and three touchdowns. Columbia had 15 first downs while piling up 277 rushing yards and 363 total yards.

"We didn't block anybody, we didn't tackle anybody," said Don Smith, the Trojan coach. "It's not that we can't do it. We just have some guys who don't want to do it. There's a lot of quitters on this team right now. I'm not used to that."

Pretty strong words. But what Smith and everyone else had just seen was unfit for family viewing unless that family was from Columbia. Once the Eagles recovered from a shaky first quarter and got their bearings, it was a blue-and-white avalanche that smothered the Trojans.

"We were our own worst enemies in the first quarter," said Eagle coach Jerry Germain, who picked up his 101st career victory. "Sometimes a team will press when it's playing a team it knows it can beat. We didn't make connections on some plays early and turned the ball over."

That part of the game must have seemed like the distant past to Smith by the time the game mercifully ended. The Trojans didn't move on their first drive, but Poston was roughed as he punted, giving Madison its only first down at the 43. Poston was sacked for a six-yard loss setting up fourth and 11.

But Ian Smith drifted out into the right flat and hauled in Poston's pass on the fake punt and easily eluded Columbia's single safety down the right sideline.

"That was my fault," Germain said. "We almost blocked the first one when we got the penalty. I should have been satisfied with that, but we tried to block the next one and got burned. Once Smith got the ball out there, we don't have anyone who can catch him."

Madison
Trojans

But Smith rarely got the ball out in the open spaces and was smothered most of the night. He did score the two-point conversion for an 8-0 Trojan lead.

"There was no blocking on the line," said Smith. "We can't even run a simple dive play. We should have been winning at halftime. Then we just quit in the second half. The same thing happened last week."

Todd Myers fumbled the ball away as Calvin Garrett recovered for the Trojans, but Poston was intercepted by Todd Wolfmeier. Then Craig Inman caught a pass, was belted by Ian Smith and Tony Treadway recovered a fumble. Each team committed four turnovers, but that was about the only even statistic.

The Trojans again couldn't move and the Eagles went 61 yards in 10 plays, with Chad Emerson covering the final four yards with 8:39 left in the second quarter. Wolfmeier (5 of 13, 101 yards) hit Brett Crawford in the right corner for an 8-8 tie. The Eagles went 42 yards in eight plays on their next drive, with Baldridge going the final seven with 2:44 left in the half. Crawford's extra point gave Columbia the lead for good.

Craig Ingram and Smith had interceptions, but the Eagles went 55 yards in 12 plays in the third quarter, with Baldridge hitting Crawford on an option pass for 17 yards on a third and 16. Baldridge scored from a yard out and a 22-8 lead.

Poston punted, but the Trojans just watched as Scott Germain picked up the ball as it lay at the Madison 40. He returned it all the way to the 10 and scored himself from a yard out three plays later.

"Our guys didn't know he could pick it up and run with it," said Smith. "We just don't know much about football."

Emerson scored on a 16-yard sweep with 2:10 left, then Baldridge bursted 45 yards through a less-than-stingy Trojan defense for a final insult with 41 seconds left.

"They were just trying to run out the clock and there weren't any tackles made," said Smith.

Playoffs for GCHS not in danger — yet

The Granite City High School fall sports season is being damaged as the teachers strike goes on. But it hasn't been irreparably damaged — yet.

The Warrior football team missed its first game on Friday and will forfeit its scheduled game against Quincy. Should the strike last through the rest of this week and the Warriors don't play at Belleville West on Friday, Granite City would be officially ineligible for the playoffs.

According to Illinois High School Association rules, football teams must play in at least eight regular-season games to be eligible for the playoffs. IHSA rules are giving the soccer and volleyball teams a lot more time before they would be ineligible for post-season play. To compete for a team title in those sports, teams must play at least six regular-season matches, according to Lavere Astroth, executive secretary of the IHSA.

"I wasn't sure of the rule because it hasn't come up too often," said Astroth. "Sports which have individual championships are different than the team sports."

But those sports — golf, tennis and cross country — have individuals competing as a team, so it's unlikely they would compete in the post-season if the strike did last that long. Post-season play in golf begins Oct. 4; the tennis sectional is Oct. 15; soccer and cross country begin the post-season Oct. 22; and volleyball regionals begin Oct. 25.

The soccer team would only be ineligible for the post-season if the strike lasted until approximately Oct. 14. The Warriors have played two games already, so would need only to play four more regular-season matches. The volleyball team — which has not yet had a match — would likewise not be in danger of missing the post-season unless the strike lasted until the second week of October.

Meanwhile, the soccer team has now had five games lost to the strike. Thursday's game with Collinsville was washed out as was their participation in the New Trier Tournament over the weekend. Also washed out was Friday's volleyball match with O'Fallon, a home golf match on Thursday as well as the Granite City Scramble on Saturday, a Thursday tennis meet at Collinsville and the Warriors' participation in the Mt. Vernon cross country meet on Saturday.

There are 12 varsity events scheduled this week.

Fall film season may seem dull after megahit summer

By Harry Hamm
Staff affiliate

SIGOURNEY WEAVER STARS as murdered anthropologist Dian Fossey in 'Gorillas in The Mist.'

The summer movie season, traditionally between Memorial Day and Labor Day, is when Hollywood always releases the best and the most of its product.

This is a period when, in addition to the normal adult moviegoing populace, more school-age teens and young adults are going to the movies than at any other time.

The summer movie season of 1988 was a boom period, with box-office receipts up 35 percent over the same period in 1987. Between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, industry analysts report, movie attendance in the United States was 10.4 percent ahead of the same period last year.

While it is rare to release a film that tops the $100 million mark, at any time of the year, this summer saw the appearance of no fewer than three $100 million hits.

The three are "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?," "Coming To America" and "Crocodile Dundee II." (The Tom Hanks summer hit, "Big," presently is at $95 million and should pass the $100 million mark within the next three weeks.)

"Rabbit" now is over the $130 million mark and will be the biggest box-office success of 1988. It also set an industry record by reaching the $100 million mark faster — within seven weeks — than any non-sequel in the history of Hollywood.

As a result, the upcoming fall season at the movies is going to seem like a real slump. With the expected drop-off in school-age attendance, and the switch to more adult themes, the fall box-office numbers will be a mere shadow of the summer's.

In any event, here are some titles to watch for that represent some of the more promising entries in the weeks between now and Christmas. We are confining our list to the major studios, such as Orion, Disney, Tri-Star, because they will be issuing films of more substance than second-line studios such as Miramax, New Line Cinema and Island Pictures. Any of these smaller studios, however, is capable, on occasion, of producing a hit that does not fall into the category of a slasher movie or exploitation film. Since release dates are mostly tentative at this time, the titles listed are not necessarily in order of release date.

"Moon Over Parador:" Richard Dreyfuss acts like a dictator wearing too much man-tan. Could be autobiographical.

"The Accidental Tourist:" William Hurt and Kathleen Turner star in this comedy-drama about a travel writer.

"Tequila Sunrise:" An action-thriller that's good in the clutches, thanks to Michelle Pfeiffer and Mel Gibson.

"Gorillas in the Mist:" Sigourney Weaver appears as Dian Fossey, the anthropologist who was murdered in 1985. Weaver also has another film due out this fall called "Working Girls," in which she plays a sexy Manhattan executive.

"Cocoon II:" Don Ameche, Hume Cronyn and Wilford Brimley remain forever young as they reprise their roles from the original.

"The Accused:" Jodie Foster plays a rape victim in what some are calling the best role of her career.

"Untitled Woody Allen Film:" The secretive Allen's latest project is so-called by the studio and is billed as a psychological drama. The all-star cast includes Mia Farrow, Sandy Dennis, Gene Hackman and Gena Rowlands. Maybe Woody should stop giving his films a title. They should just be called "A Film By Woody Allen." If nothing else, it would end the wait for a title.

"Without A Clue:" A comic twist on the Sherlock Holmes tradition starring Michael Caine and Ben Kingsley. A preview audience saw it at the Clarkson Cine a few weeks ago and loved it, according to audience surveys taken after the showing.

"Everybody's All American:" Dennis Quaid and Jessica Lange span 30 years in this extra-large slice of life.

"The Land Before Time:" An animated family adventure directed by Don Bluth ("An American Tail," "The Secret of Nimh") and produced by Steven Spielberg and George Lucas.

"Rainman:" Dustin Hoffman plays an idiot savant and Tom Cruise is the greedy brother trying to take his inheritance. Could be another Oscar nomination for Hoffman.

"Imagine:" Documentary on John Lennon that has all the insiders in Hollywood raving.

"Twins:" Arnold Schwarzenegger and Danny DeVito play twins separated at birth in what, we hope, is a comedy.

"A Cry in the Dark:" Drama based on fact about a murder, starring Meryl Streep. Originally called "Evil Angels."

"They Live:" Intense science fiction film from John Carpenter, who was responsible for "Escape From New York" and "The Thing." Look for lots of blood.

"Dirty Rotten Scoundrels:" Michael Caine and Steve Martin in a comedy about con artists on the Continent.

"Mississippi Burning:" Gene Hackman and Willem DaFoe headline in a film about civil rights set in Mississippi in 1964. DaFoe's latest role was as Jesus Christ. This role is a bit of a comedown.

"Running on Empty:" Contemporary drama with a contemporary cast headed by Judd Hirsch, River Phoenix and Christine Lahti.

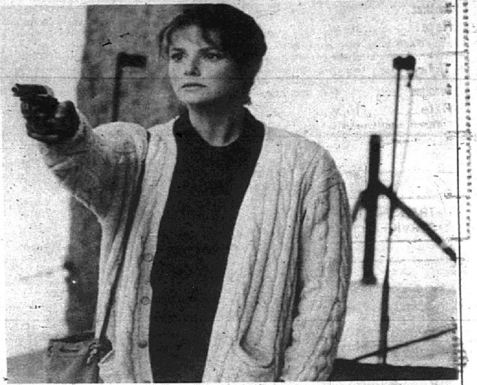
"Lean on Me:" Based on true story of Joe Clark, embattled public school principal of Paterson, N.J. high school. Morgan Freeman plays Clark.

"Her Alibi:" Tom Selleck without two friends and a baby, but with a girlfriend and a job as a writer of thrillers.

Also watch for "Sweethearts Dance," "Beaches," "Last Rites" and lest we forget, "Hollywood Chainsaw Hookers."

'Betrayed': love vs. duty creates suspense

By Harry Hamm
Staff affiliate



DEBRA WINGER PORTRAYS Cathy Weaver, an undercover operative who, with her life at stake, must choose between her heart and her conscience in 'Betrayed.'

Director Constantine Costa-Gavras has made a career out of composing films of irritating political comment; motion pictures like "Z" and "Missing."

His movies stir the consciousness and frequently are infuriating. But always, they remain basically honest and purposely overstated. Costa-Gavras knows how to drive home a point.

The biting, inflammatory style of Costa-Gavras continues in "Betrayed" (4 stars), a film about a white supremacy group in rural America. The movie asks more questions than it answers and leaves an audience unsettled about what they may not know.

The film opens in Chicago, where a Jewish, all-night talk show host (Richard Libertini) is just completing another program filled with left-wing issues and odious callers. As he exits his car in the basement parking garage of his Chicago high-rise, the host is gunned down by two men in a van who spray paint the letters "ZOG" on the side of his blood-stained auto.

FBI agent Cathy Weaver (Debra Winger) is sent into rural Illinois to learn more about what the bureau feels is a grass-roots, militant racist group that master-minded the slaying. Weaver poses as an itinerant combine operator. In that capacity she becomes friends with a farmer, Garry Simmons (Tom Berenger). Simmons is a decorated Vietnam vet and a widower with two children. He lives with his mother.

As their relationship develops, Weaver's knowledge and involvement with Simmons' membership in a racist group also grows. The group's mission is to rid the world of what they call "ZOG," which stands for Zionist Occupation Government.

Simmons is an angry, bitter and lonely man. The arrival of Weaver and the start of their love affair brings out a trust in him that has been buried for years. It is a trust so total in its sincerity that he almost immediately involves Weaver in the secret, murderous activities of his white supremacist organization.

At this point Weaver wants out of the assignment. She is torn between her love for Simmons and her responsibility as an FBI agent. But the bureau says she must see the undercover assignment through to its painful finish.

The best thing about "Betrayed" is the personal drama of the attachment between Berenger and Winger. It is viable and emotional. No matter what is happening in the story, and sometimes it is very ugly, you will be rooting for a miracle that somehow can save their relationship.

"Betrayed" is a very suspenseful film, especially near its finale. The ensemble casting is perfection. As aberrant as this script may be, the film flows like a true story. I suppose that is what makes "Betrayed" so alarming.

"Betrayed" is recommended viewing for informed, adult audiences. The film will stay with you for a while, both because of its hopeful ending and also because of the soul-searching premise it puts forth.

Rated R (violence, language and subject matter). Running time is 130 minutes.

The Repertory Theater to hold auditions Sept. 17

Joint auditions for eligible, experienced performers will be held by The Repertory Theater of St. Louis and Theater Project Company on Sept. 17 at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. in the New City Theater at the New City School, 5209 Waterman Ave., St. Louis.

The tryouts are for productions scheduled for both theaters' mainstage and touring productions, as well as The Rep's Studio Theater.

To qualify as an "eligible, experienced performer," an individual must have been employed during any given year as a stage actor for two consecutive weeks and have earned during that time the equivalent of two weeks minimum wage, plus fringe health and pension benefits or its monetary equivalent of $554; or an individual must have earned $554 in any year working as a performer in motion pictures, television or radio.

Others interested can audition on Sunday, Sept. 18 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Participant will be allowed four minutes in which to present selections from a classic play and a contemporary play. (Theater Project Company prefers hearing a British dialect when performing an excerpt from a contemporary play.)

Individuals may sing 16 bars of a song as part of the audition. Musical accompaniment will be provided. Auditionees should bring their own music.

Call Louise at 968-7340 to arrange audition.

Big crisis faces children, families in today's society

By Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

A lot of big people are paying more attention to "small details" these days. Historians, politicians, government officials and cultural institutions are joining the traditional child advocates — parents, teachers, doctors, psychologists and social workers — in focusing on the importance of America's children.

"The crisis facing children and families today is perhaps the biggest crisis in our history," Urie Bronfenbrenner says. Bronfenbrenner, an architect of Operation Head Start, professor emeritus at Cornell University, scholar of child development and father of six, has been concerned with and about the American family for 40 years.

"What are the three greatest and most consequential changes in American life in recent years?" he challenged his audience at a Smithsonian Institution Resident Associate Program lecture. The "students," with help from the professor, eventually got all three: working mothers and fathers, single parents and, "most consequential" of all, increased levels of poverty. According to Bronfenbrenner, "One quarter of our nation's children under 6 now live below the federally established poverty line."

Bronfenbrenner enumerates some of the other problems facing America's children: "Our divorce rate is the highest in the world. Teen-age pregnancy, infant mortality, child abuse, drug abuse and youth suicides continue to rise at alarming rates. We're one of the last in academic excellence among modern nations."

Add to these grim statistics those from other recent studies: schools too "unprepared and overwhelmed" to meet the needs of the 2 million plus, mainly Asian and Hispanic immigrant students; lack of medical care for 7 million children; lack of child care for about 7 million children 13 years and under, and 500,000 homeless children.

"Why does the United States with its bounty have problems of this magnitude affecting its children?" Bronfenbrenner answers a question with a question: "Who looks at kids?"

For one, historians do. In recent years, the history of childhood has come of age and is, as one scholar put it, "part of the cutting edge of American historical scholarship."

Have Babies Really Come a Long Way?

At least, beyond infancy, children are living longer. According to one estimate, half of all Puritan New England children in the 17th century died before they were 10 years old. In the South, Colonial children had an even higher death rate. Most historians of childhood in America stress the high mortality rate of children well into the 19th century. Smallpox (before vaccine was available in 1800), digestive tract diseases, malaria, tuberculosis and infection were all child killers. Then as now, accidents took their toll, as children fell into wells and set their clothes afire with candles. Cures like opium, ant eggs and onion juice and live frogs tied in muslin bags around the patients' necks were often lethal. Diets of fatty foods and alcoholic potions didn't help either.

William P. Dewees, the first American doctor to write about childhood illnesses in "A Treatise on the Physical and Medical Treatment of Children (1825)," was brash enough to suggest that father might help with the baby but knew he would feel disgraced.

Father was the undisputed head of the household in the family villages of preindustrial America. In Puritan New England, children were to be silent unless spoken to. Good table manners were a must: "Stuff not thy mouth so as to fill thy cheeks." Several New England Colonies had "stubborn child" laws — never enforced — calling for the death penalty of a "stubborn or rebellious son."

Disciplining and educating a child in the right conduct was crucial for a Puritan parent, for although there were no guarantees, a child might thus be saved from the "Unquenchable Flames of Hell" to which the Puritan faith of Calvinism relegated even infants, who were damned to birth. Little Betty Sewall wept, her father wrote in his diary, when she heard biblican stories about hellfire.

From early childhood, Puritan children shared the same experiences as the adults in the family. They attended funerals, watched executions and read sexually explicit works like the poem about the corrupt behavior of Lot. Children were an integral part of the family economic unit as well, feeding chickens and winding spools as toddlers. By 6 or 7, a girl could sew, knit, weave and spin and a boy knew the farming arts.

Life was easier for youngsters in the more child-oriented Middle and Southern Colonies. Dutch and English Colonial boys and girls celebrated holidays with fairs featuring toy booths, puppet shows and plays. A 1739 description of a young New Yorker's life: "The young lady's days are passed in receiving and paying visits; her nights at balls and masquerades, or at cards and dice." The young lady was 10-years-old.

Young slave children had no such advantages. According to a contemporary source, they "were left, during a great portion of the day, on the ground at the doors of their own huts to their own struggles and efforts." Boys and girls began field work between the ages of 7 and 10. Historian David K. Wiggins points out, however, that for the young there was time for play. As children will, they engaged in "make-believe" and imitated the world their parents and other adults inhabited, conducting slave auctions and funerals.

The Picture Changes for Children

Life likely did not change for slave children until emancipation, but the picture began to change earlier for New England children. The relatively few family portraits in the early 18th century usually depicted an aloof patriarch and stiffly posed and serious mother and children. After the Revolution, portraits by some of America's finest artists depicted affectionate families with children at the center of attention.

Hardworking Quaker and Puritan families began to soften their attitudes toward their children. Help came from an unexpected quarter as well — two European philosophers. John Locke's view that children's "slates" were clean at birth, awaiting only proper guidance, and Jean Jacques Rousseau's vision of childhood innocence took hold in America.

"Let every child before going to bed hold a court of revelry...devoted to romp, to dance, to shout, to sing, to riot and to play" urged a widely used 19th-century pediatric manual. Childrearing manuals were in heavy use as the Victorian era dawned.

The mid-19th century saw families beginning to move to the cities where new industries flourished and where the father was employed. The mother became the reigning moral force in these middle-class homes, protecting the innocent in a dirty and dangerous city.

Even school could be dangerous. By 1860, more than half of the nation's children were getting some formal education. But an 1859 article in Atlantic magazine reported one child had died "insane from overwork and raving of algebra." At home, young girls could learn the social graces over tiny tea sets and miniature furniture made just for them.

Saving the Children

Other little girls in the city learned that if they dozed over their work in the sweatshop, cold water would be dashed in their faces to awaken them. Their days went from 5:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. without a break. Lewis Hine, the "conscience with a camera" who recorded young American workers, began with other reformers to fight for child labor laws.

The Progressive Movement at the turn of the 20th century focused on banishing "chaos" and "criminality" from the cities. By 1920, child labor was reduced, and compulsory education was a reality in the Northeast.

Public schools, kindergartens and playgrounds got children off the streets; they also separated youngsters from their families and from each other. Public schools were segregated by race and often by ethnicity. Instant Americanization was a goal, and many immigrant children felt alienated and terrified. Author Jade Snow Wong recalled that her father advised her that if she "said nothing, no one would think I was stupid."

The Progressive Era also saw the rise of professionals devoted to children's needs: pediatricians, psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers and group organizers. The Camp Fire Girls (1910), the Boy Scouts (1910) and the Girl Scouts (1912) stressed the verities such as honesty. "Dear Chief," a young Boy Scout wrote in 1911, "Enclosed please find my Buckskin Badge. I have returned it on account of eating some candy."

"Child-saving" was performed before the Depression by the private sector and by local government. An exception was the Children's Bureau created in 1912 by President William Howard Taft. It relentlessly gathered heartbreaking data: New boys in the coal mines were called "red tops" because their fingers bled constantly. Children 6-15 years old often worked 14-hour days in the heat weeding beets. The Bureau's work resulted in the inclusion of a national minimum standard for child labor in 1938's Fair Labor Standards Act.

For migrant workers like Cesar Chavez in the 1930's, the national minimum standard didn't mean much. From the first to the eighth grade, the boy followed the crops with his parents and was in 37 different schools. Restaurants in the California farming communities would not serve the family because they "didn't sell to Mexicans," as a waitress once informed them. The adult civil rights leader remembers, "It stayed with us."

Millions of American children who grew up in it would never forget the Great Depression. But despite hardship, a distinct child life emerged in America in the 1930s. As radios, comic books and movie houses proliferated, the world of the young expanded beyond their backyards. Kids and their friends could relate to Superman, the Lone Ranger and Shirley Temple. After the war, television came into their lives and they learned such new mysteries of adult life as consumerism.

Boom!

During the Depression, the WWII years and beyond, there was ever greater public recognition of and government involvement in meeting the needs of children. Suddenly there were so many of them. The postwar generation influenced American society profoundly.

Children like 6-year-old Ruby in New Orleans braved mobs daily just to attend school, after the historic Supreme Court decision in 1954 outlawing segregation in public schools. In the 1960s and '70s, America's young were in the front ranks of Civil Rights marches and protests against the war in Vietnam.

Even their music changed things. In 1951, Alan Freed, a Cleveland disc jockey, renamed black "rhythm and blues" music "rock-and-roll" — the street euphemisms for dancing and sex. Rock-and-roll became a giant industry and a way of life for the nation's youth.

Who's Minding the Children?

The flower children of the '60s sang and rocked and waited for something to turn up. For many of them something has — children of their own. Singing and rocking have taken on new meanings. But Baby Boomers, it seems, have also created the "Baby Bust." A steadily declining birth rate has resulted in the smallest American family in history, according to a new census report.

"Our most overriding goal is to strengthen families," Dodie Borup says. Borup, U.S. Commissioner for Children, Youth and Families, is chief of the Children's Bureau and the top administrator of Operation Head Start. Head Start's main thrusts are pre-school education for children in what Borup calls "at risk" families and parenting education.

About 65 percent of mothers with school-age children now work outside the home, according to Yale's Bush Center in Child Development and Social Policy. "Today, fewer than one in 10 American families has the luxury of having mother home with the children while father is working," Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-Conn.) recently noted. Dodd and others have introduced child care bills that are now before Congress.

On-site child care is proliferating in government and cultural institutions. Barbara Leonard, director of the General Services Administration Child Care Program, reports that, in September, 25 on-site child care centers will join the 12 already in federal buildings around the country. Not only, as the Women's Liberation Movement slogan has it, is a woman's place in the House — and in the Senate — but today, so is a child's. Both the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives have on-site child care centers.

Children need homework support

ABCs for Parents

By Jane Cosby

Nobody likes it. Kids don't like doing it, parents don't like supervising it and teachers don't like correcting it. So why are parents and teachers insisting on homework as a regular part of the educational process?

According to a pamphlet published by the National PTA titled "Help Your Child Get the Most Out of Homework," studies show that homework, when it is returned and commented upon or graded, can improve children's grades and achievements dramatically.

The pamphlet explains that the purpose of homework is to reinforce and extend topics that have been covered in class and provide a way for parents to keep up with what their children are studying.

The National PTA offers some general guidelines for the amount of homework your child should have each day. Children in kindergarten through grade three should have 20 minutes or less of homework. In grades four through six, anywhere from 20 to 40 minutes a day of homework should be expected.

Students in junior high and high school will have varying amounts of homework depending on the subjects being studied. At these ages, parents should discuss with the teachers involved what is expected as far as homework is concerned.

Parents play a crucial role in helping children complete their homework. The National PTA suggests that parents set aside quiet time every afternoon or evening for reading, letter writing or games. This establishes a pattern of regular work time and helps get kids into the habit of homework.

Since parents often don't know how to help or when to help with homework, the National PTA offers some tips.

First of all, it is suggested that parents try to be home and available for help when homework is being done. This shows your child that you view homework as a valuable part of his education.

Look for homework every day. Ask to see homework that has been turned in and checked by the teacher. Check to see that your child's homework assignments are being done properly.

If there is a problem with the homework, talk to your child's teacher. Don't be ashamed to admit you don't understand what is expected in the homework assignments. This is a common problem among parents.

Sign and date your child's homework after he completes it. This shows the teacher that you are interested enough to check your child's homework.

Children in younger grades will need more guidance than older children. Make sure your child understands what he is supposed to do. Read over any directions and try one or two problems together. Then your child can complete the rest.

Don't do the work for your child. Work with him and encourage him to do the work himself.

Be sure to praise your child for completed assignments. It is not recommended, however, that you offer money or gifts as rewards for school work. Instead, try using special activities as incentives for getting the job done.

Some children may work better with music or a radio playing; others will find it distracting and need total quiet to work effectively. Let your child find which works best for him.

Television, however, is another matter. Studying in front of the television is strongly discouraged.

Finally, children complain about homework all the time. But if your child seems continually bored or continually finds the homework too difficult, talk to the teacher. Making the teacher aware of the situation will help get assignments matched with your child's ability.

Toll-free hot line answers questions

The American Foundation for the Blind operates a free toll-free telephone hot line to answer questions about blindness as well as services, technology, publications and consumer products available to blind and visually impaired people.

The hotline, 1-800-232-5463, is in operation during the day, Monday through Friday.

Since its inception in January 1986, the hot line has received nearly 15,000 calls from blind and visually impaired people, their families, professionals in the blindness field, and the general public.

"The number of calls to the hot line has increased by more than 300 percent since 1986, reflecting the growing need for fast, reliable information about blindness and visual impairment," said William F. Gallagher, executive director.
